A PASSING STORM

Phyllis J. Burton

She tried to cut out the reality of her life, but it was no use; nothing had changed and she doubted if it ever would. Her marriage had been like a fragile cliff that was constantly being hit and ravaged by huge devastating waves, each one destroying a little more of the love that had been its true foundation.

Jennifer and Peter Redmond have been married for 25 years. It has been a wonderful marriage – until their 24th wedding anniversary, when everything starts to change. Peter becomes absorbed in his career, working hard to be made Chief Executive – even taking a flat closer to work. His dedication is about to pay off, and Jennifer understands his ambition, but she is so desperately lonely. Her two grown-up sons have both moved out, and their house, Barndon, seems so empty.

Becoming disillusioned with her husband and marriage, she runs away to Scotland where she meets gentle stranger, Angus Cameron. Whilst walking alone in the Highlands, she falls during a severe mountain storm and is seriously injured. Her ambitious, insincere womanising husband, Peter, persuades her to return home with him. But will she stay with Peter in a loveless marriage, or will she return to Scotland and find true love with Angus? And, how does a thin and straggly dingo dog in the outback of Australia, influence what eventually happens...? Clever dog.

A Passing Storm is an eternal triangle with many tragic twists and turns. It will appeal to fans of romance fiction.

“Phyllis J. Burton has skilfully woven a story of love and deceit. Her writing is precise, her characters colourful and her description allows the reader to actually visit the lovely British Isles through her words. Highly recommended”
