

TRAVEL BACK IN TIME

Meet Eloise, who can't forget the past – and finds herself travelling back there in The Primrose Path

Eloise James has got a good life on paper. She has her best friend Charlotte, her partner Geoffrey and her job as a teacher. However, she is stuck in the past – which contains the shadow of her ex-boyfriend Paul, who she can't stop thinking about.

She met Paul in school and he became her first love. However, he was not a boy in her class but her teacher who was twelve years her senior. Despite facing adversity they enjoyed a platonic relationship – one which ended abruptly after Paul died in a car crash. Eloise's teenage passion, which was never satisfied, still remains.

Geoffrey, tired of being second best to her dead ex-boyfriend, leaves, prompting her to take an overdose. Her suicide attempt fails but she suddenly finds herself flung back in time – to the day Paul dies. What is she supposed to do now? Can she save Paul from being killed – or is she destined to watch the man she loves die again?

Travel back in time with Eloise whose only solution to her dilemma is to venture back into the past. Susan Giles weaves an intricate thread of history throughout the book, creating a tale of love and time travel reminiscent of Audrey Niffenegger's novel The Time Traveller's Wife.

About the Author:

A romantic at heart, Susan started writing love stories in her teens, and was one of the last teenagers to elope to Gretna Green before the age of majority was lowered to eighteen. But for her the reality of married life could not compete with her ideal, and the marriage sadly ended in divorce. She now lives in Somerset, where she divides her time between writing, reading and gardening.
